

Investor's Business Daily has an editorial today praising the House Republican alternative budget blueprint, noting that

"The House Republicans admit President Obama and Democratic congressional leaders aren't about to undergo a Damascus-like conversion on economic policy. But they refuse to let the president suggest that spending trillions at the expense of future generations is the only way out of the jam the economy is in." As Congressman Pence posted on RedState :

The "Republican Road to Recovery " is a blueprint for a substantive, comprehensive budget alternative that will be introduced on the floor of the House of Representatives next week. The Republican budget will be built on the values Americans nationwide are practicing every day.

As a substantive debate about how to get our economy growing again begins to unfold, Republicans will continue to offer better solutions that are built on the time-honored principles of fiscal responsibility and growth. Let the debate begin.
